The New Dialysis Centre – Lighter, Brighter, More Space

Open Day – December 2015

Christine Smith and Prof Calne

Addenbrooke's new Dialysis Centre has been up and running since just before Christmas with staff and patients gradually moving in.

Peter Constable visiting the water treatment plant of the new unit on Open Day last December Professor Sir Roy Calne, recently visited the new Centre where he met one of his former patients, Christine Smith in the new Home Therapies Unit. Christine is a long standing Home Haemodialysis patient.

John Torode, Specialist Nurse in Home Therapies commented on the new unit, saying, "it has given us more space for teaching and training for both PD and Haemo. We have three haemo places within the unit, which means, along with training, we can get people in who have problems with access or their machine. The unit does not feel like a hospital, it's modern, light and bright."

Christmas Carol Service 2015

Once again AKPA and the NKF (National Kidney Federation) held a joint Christmas Carol Service in Great St. Mary's, Cambridge in early December. We were treated to a wonderful selection of carols and motets sung by St. Augustine's Choir under their director Philip Mead with organist Cara Ellison.

The service was led by Dr Janet Bunker who gave a moving address on the thankfulness of recipients of kidney transplants to the donor families. The wonderful gift they have been able to provide is always recognised as being given at a time of sorrow for them.

The large congregation consisted of dialysis patients and transplant patients and their families, as well as nurses and doctors from Addenbrooke's. During the service a number of candles were lit by AKPA members, NKF members, kidney patients and Addenbrooke's staff in memory of donors and their families.

After the service there was an opportunity to chat over a cup of tea and some wonderful food (both savoury and sweet) provided by AKPA's Sarah Rook, Angela Green and Nicky Moncrieff.

During the service a collection was taken, and the £750 was shared between AKPA and the NKF.

Thank You Julia

The AKPA Committee are very sorry to lose long serving Committee staff member Julia McCarthy who has left Addenbrooke's to take up a new post as Practice Development Nurse in Bradford Hospital.

Julia joined the AKPA committee in 2006 shortly after becoming Sister at Addenbrooke's satellite dialysis unit at the West Suffolk Hospital, Bury St Edmunds. While at the West Suffolk Julia, along with dialysis patient and committee member Derek Varley, organised social events for patients, including a weekend in Canterbury, trips to Thursford Christmas Show and Christmas parties, all funded by AKPA. Also, as televisions could not be installed in the Bury Unit, she arranged AKPA funding to purchase DVD players for patients use while on dialysis.

Julia has always given generously of her time to support patients, and regularly attended AKPA meetings to advise the committee on patient's needs. The Committee send their grateful thanks for all her help, advice and dedication, and wish her well in her new job.

World Kidney Day 2016

The concourse stall, manned by Carol Slattery [AKPA]. In the dialysis unit there were family activities and a cake stall.

To mark World Kidney Day on Thursday 17 March, AKPA and Kidney Research UK shared a stall in the Addenbrooke's concourse, providing leaflets and information about kidney awareness.

There was a great interest from passers by in finding out about how to take care of their own kidneys and also about being on the donor list. We heard many stories from people about families and friends who had come into contact with kidney disease. With both organisations present we were able to share our experience and knowledge.

Positive Results from Exercise Programme

The move to the new dialysis unit has seen an increase in the number of patients recruited to the AKPA funded dialysis exercise programme.

Sushant Jeurkar, the Physiotherapist leading the project, reports that patients are showing very positive beneficial results from participation and this will reflect on the 9 month data which will be published shortly. This valuable information will be shared with the Leicester Intradialytic Exercise Study, which will further help support the need for such services in all dialysis units.

One of the aims of this programme is to move towards an “Exercise Prescription” for patients in conjunction with their dialysis recommendation in the future.

Patients who have benefitted from the exercise programme are encouraged to spread the word and help in recruiting more people to get on the bike.

Online Access to Medical Records

PatientView is getting closer

PatientView, is a national website that gives kidney patients online access to key parts of their medical records. Since Addenbrooke’s signed up with PatientView, a group of AKPA kidney patients has helped trial the system and AKPA have funded installation costs.

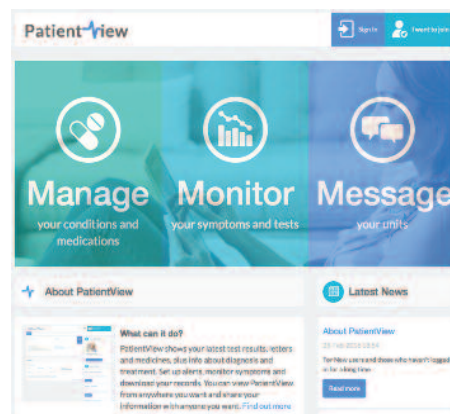

Various problems have slowed progress, but now Mark Thomas, Deputy Manager for the Transplant directorate, is putting the finishing touches to transferring patient data from eHospital to PatientView. If all goes to plan, by mid to late summer, staff in relevant areas: dialysis, transplant and specialist clinic services, will start enrolling interested patients. And by early next year it is hoped new patients will be invited to join as a matter of course.

“MyChart (part of eHospital) will shortly allow all Addenbrooke’s patients to see aspects of their medical records online.”

Will MyChart make PatientView obsolete?

MyChart is an online portal which will soon allow all Addenbrooke’s patients to see aspects of their medical records. Is it worth patients enrolling with PatientView when MyChart is so close?

The sign-in page that patients will use in future to access their test results etc.

Dr Afzal Chaudhry

Dr Afzal Chaudhry, Trust and Renal Lead for IT and Consultant Nephrologist is very clear about this. He says; “MyChart is an exciting prospect and

I see it and PatientView being complementary, especially for patients moving between Addenbrooke’s and other dialysis units. Examples of this might be holiday dialysis or away-from-home emergency treatment.

PatientView is designed with renal patients in mind, to meet their specific needs. It provides information about diagnoses, drugs, and results and will also allow letters to be seen. Data is uploaded to PatientView from all renal units that a patient visits, and so will provide a record of care spread across multiple hospitals. For transplant patients receiving care at both Addenbrooke’s and their local hospital this will be very helpful.

MyChart by contrast provides an Addenbrooke’s view of the patient – it too will allow the patient to see their diagnoses, drugs, results and letters but it will also show details of appointments.

An additional benefit is that it will show the patient all of their Addenbrooke’s data, not just the renal-specific aspects. Patients will be able to add and update information about their problems, drugs and allergies and these will be available to the doctor to review with the patient at the next consultation.

Both MyChart and PatientView allow for patients to complete surveys and questionnaires. And they will both be accessible from anywhere the patient can get an Internet connection.

So there is some overlap – but in essence PatientView is a renal view of the patient’s record irrespective of location; MyChart is an Addenbrooke’s view of the patient’s record irrespective of speciality.”

Not everyone has a computer and Dr Chaudhry stresses that neither PatientView nor MyChart will ever become the only way patients can access services or by which the hospital will communicate with them – but at the same time a significant percentage of the population now wish to have electronic access and we are keen to support that.

Interested readers can find out more about PatientView at <https://www.patientview.org>

Where the Money Goes

During the last financial year AKPA provided a total of £12,000 in Welfare grants for sick and needy patients and their families. And provided food, gifts, Christmas trees and decorations for unit patients dialysing over the holidays at a cost of £1,400.

The Dialysis Exercise programme is AKPA's current major project and we have funded exercise bikes and physiotherapists at a cost of £20,000. We also funded extra hours for a counsellor to visit patients in the satellite units.

The Association sponsored patients to attend the NKF conference and in order to publicise organ transplantation, we supported the National Transplant Games, all at a cost of £900.

In conjunction with ALTA (Addenbrooke's Liver Transplant Association) we continued funding therapeutic massage for patients in the transplant wards. We also funded wristbands for patients, reprinting of the skin cancer leaflet and transplant research.

Following the dialysis centre's recent move we have recently funded a microwave oven, water boiler and ice machine for the new unit.

BKPA to Extend National Advocacy Service

Some Addenbrooke's renal patients may already be aware of, or have had reason to use, the Kidney Patient Advocacy Service. Sandy Lines, the Advocacy Officer for East Midlands and the East of England frequently attends AKPA meetings and is on hand to advise and help with patient problems in a sensitive, compassionate and confidential manner.

The Service started as a partnership between the British Kidney Patient Association (BKPA) and the National Kidney Federation (NKF), but has recently been brought under the sole management of the BKPA in order to secure its long term future and extend the service it provides for patients and their families.

Advocacy is about:

- SPEAKING up for patients.
- EMPOWERING patients to make sure that their rights are respected and their views and wishes are heard at all times.

- ASSISTING patient's carers and families with self-advocacy and helping them to navigate the system.
- REPRESENTING the views, wishes and needs of patients to decision makers at all levels.

Advocacy provides:

- Patient & Kidney Patient Association support and guidance services.
- Representation of Patient interests locally, regionally and nationally.
- Research & Identification of patients issues to inform BKPA's campaigning for change.

The Advocacy Service can be contacted via the BKPA Reception on:

Telephone: 01420 541424

National Charities Appeal Against NICE Decision

Both the NKF and the BKPA have appealed against a decision by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) not to recommend six new immunosuppressant drugs. Despite representations at the two previous stages, NICE has not changed its recommendations.

The BKPA said, "We believe that the impact of this recommendation has not been fully considered by NICE and have asked them to reconsider the wording of the technology appraisal."

The older drugs azathioprine, cyclosporin and prednisolone are not affected by this ruling.

For further details, and to see more about why we are concerned, see the BKPA appeal documents. For the final determination from NICE see:
<https://www.nice.org.uk/guidance/GIDTAG348/documents/final-appraisal-determination-document>.

New Surveys Aim to Improve Patient Care

Think Kidneys: the British Kidney Patient Association has joined forces with the UK Renal Registry to support better measurement of people's experience when they have kidney disease.

This work is an essential part of a national project to improve the involvement of people in their own care. Through the Patient Reported Experience Measure (PREM) surveys patients will be able to report their experience on topics such as communication and support from members of the renal team, decisions, privacy and dignity and the environment.

This will provide the opportunity for patients to have their say about their care, and offer Renal Units the opportunity to improve their services in line with patient need.

NHS England Sets New Holiday Dialysis Rules

Changes to holiday dialysis funding across the NHS mean that unit staff can no longer arrange dialysis sessions at patients' destinations. The new rules have been set by NHS England, not the units, and may be subject to further change.

Information leaflets explaining new procedures have been circulated to patients. The main points are as follows

Patients are now responsible for contacting units in their holiday area and establishing if they have space for the dates required. This needs to be done well in advance. The home unit will then do blood tests and certification nearer the time of the holiday.

NHS units in the UK can claim the cost of holiday haemodialysis sessions from the NHS and there will be no charge to patients. Charges to patients at private units vary, as some units are able to reclaim the cost up to the NHS tariff level, with patients liable for extra costs.

For holidays in the EU / EEA: if you have an EHIC card (free and can be applied for at the website listed below), many state-run units can reclaim all or part of the cost from the UK government (some have extra care charges that have to be paid by all patients). Again you will need to book well in advance and check for extra charges. Some dialysis cruises within the EU / EEA area also make it possible to fund dialysis via the EHIC card. You will need to check with the cruise operator.

Patients can apply, and hope to get reimbursement for the cost (up to the NHS tariff) from NHS England in advance. If this is agreed, the patient will have to pay the charges and reclaim after the trip. You cannot apply for funding retrospectively.

Outside the EU/EEA you will, in all likelihood, be liable for the full cost of your dialysis; you should contact the dialysis unit of your choice to check availability of spaces and the cost of treatment.

The situation for peritoneal dialysis is slightly different in that not every country offers it as a treatment and therefore no reciprocal agreement exists. Patients should speak to the Home Therapies team to check that they can get deliveries of what they need in that country before arranging holidays. The Home Therapies team will arrange delivery of stocks. The cost of delivery, abroad or in the UK, to somewhere other than your usual address will vary and you will be liable for this cost.

In appropriate cases financial assistance for holidays with dialysis may be available from, AKPA or the British Kidney Patients Association (BKPA). Please contact them through the Renal Social Care Practitioner, if you wish to apply.

If you have any questions please speak to a member of staff at your unit who should be able to help you.

Working for Patients: the NKF and the All Party Parliamentary Kidney Group

AKPA is a member of the National Kidney Federation (NKF). An important part of the NKF's work is providing the administrative organisation for the All Party Parliamentary Kidney Group (APPKG).

The stated purpose of the APPKG is: "To improve understanding in Parliament of kidney disease and transplant medicine and promote improvements in the health and care services that are available to improve the health of people with renal failure". In this parliament there are over 100 MPs signed up to the group from across all political parties. To ensure the group retains the support of its members the APPKG meets when issues come up.

Its current focus includes: the Dialysis commissioning issue – to remain centralised or pushed to local CCGs; the drop (by 5%) in the numbers of Transplants in 2014/15; the Wales opt in/opt out situation. A recent meeting also focussed on the NICE proposal to limit the number of recommended immunosuppressant therapies.

Over the last years the APPKG have published manifestos on increasing the opportunities for Home therapies, improving kidney donation within UK Black and Minority Ethnic (BAME) communities and Transplants.
